

Ph.D students in the Centre for Family Research and its forerunners (1968 - 2016).

For those who were awarded a Cambridge University Ph.D., the title of the dissertation and the date of the award of the degree are taken from theses held in the Cambridge University Library thesis collection. This list also notes studentships or funding source for some students. The University Department through which the dissertation was submitted are also given – neither the Centre, nor its forerunners had a status in the University allowing this to take place directly through the Centre. So Centre graduate students were registered through another Cambridge University Department or Faculty.

There several reasons why some graduate students working in the Centre did not submit a dissertation to Cambridge University. Some may not have completed their PhD project; a few submitted to another University, while others did not complete their work in Cambridge and moved to posts elsewhere, or there were other reasons. For these cases where there is no record of a Cambridge PhD dissertation, there is a note of the work they undertook in the Centre which been taken from the annual reports etc of the Centre. The lists includes all those recorded as beginning their post graduate work (or studentship) from the early days in the Unit for Medical Applications of Psychology from 1968 to the Centre for Family Research in 2016. An indication is given of the Department through which the student is registered. The record attempts to give indications of subsequent careers where this is known.

Almost 60 PhDs have been awarded to those in the Centre or its fore runners. The first was awarded to Paul Light in 1974 (The role taking skills of 4 year old children) with a further two more the following year (Ian Clifton Everest. (Reading and perceptual organisation) and Denise Campbell (Avard) (Evaluation of aspects of neonatal paediatric services –SCBUs).

CFR after an entry indicates that there is a copy of the thesis in the Centre for Family Research Lowenfeld library.
